Tallahassee Boys Win.
Wednesday, the 8th, Quincy's 3d base ball team arrived on the 1:38 train to play ball against the Tallahassee 3d team. The game was called about 4 o'clock by Wm. McIntosh, Jr. There was a very good crowd of children out to see the game, boys and girls, which gave the Tallahassee boys good support with their cheering. Quincy made most of their runs in the first part of the game, while Tallahassee kept steady scoring all the way through the game. Wilson's excellent pitching, Gramling's good catching, Renisch at short stop held them down in the last part of the game. It was one goose egg right after another for Quincy. The chief of police kept good order during the game.

The following was the line up of both teams:

Tallahassee.....	Position.....	Quincy.....
Gramling.....	Catch.....	G. Pittman
Wilson.....	Pitch.....	Hawkins
Bentley.....	Short Stop.....	Howard
Cook.....	1st Base.....	Murphy
Williams.....	2d Base.....	Woodberry
Burke.....	3d Base.....	J. Pittman
Sheets.....	Left Field.....	Curtis
Burkhardt.....	Center Field.....	Sanford May
McCorr.....	Right Field.....	Harvin

We also won a game from Crawfordville, the score was 7 to 6.

We expect to play another game with Quincy soon. ROOSTER.

Death of Col. T. S. Lutterloh.
The Fayetteville Observer of the 16th inst. contained the following account of the death of Col. T. S. Lutterloh, father of Mr. R. B. Lutterloh, of this city:

Yesterday morning about mid-day Col. Thomas S. Lutterloh passed away—his death was quiet and peaceful—his passing away was as gentle as the sleep of a little child.

Mr. Lutterloh's death was not unexpected, for days he was on the eve of death—old age had worn out the bodily frame. He was born in Chatham county July 16th, 1816, and today is the anniversary of his 84th year, a good old age, yet he was not the oldest of those who connect the present with the past, but his life has been so bound with the interests of this town that we feel that a great link has been broken. Mr. Lutterloh came to Fayetteville when quite a lad, and, for several years, lived with the late James Kyle. After that he entered the store of Charles T. Haigh. He remained with Mr. Haigh until he went into business on his own account at the Lutterloh corner now occupied by the Atlantic Coast Line as a passenger depot. He was a very successful business man, one of the largest cotton buyers in Fayetteville. He built and operated the first turpentine distillery in Fayetteville, and was owner of one or two boats that plied daily between this town and Wilmington. In 1855 he was elected by the Know Nothing party Mayor of Fayetteville. In fact his life was a marked one in the business community. He was an honest, fearless man, very quiet in all his ways, but determined in all acts. Since the war Mr. Lutterloh has devoted more of his time to politics than to business. He represented this county in the Legislature, was Clerk of the Superior Court, and was very active in all political matters. He leaves a wife, the daughter of the late Jarvis Buxton, one daughter, Mrs. Fanny Utely, and two sons, Ralph and Herbert. All of these were with him in his last hours. When the reaper came to gather in the ripened grain we feel that there is naught to lament, but the vacant chair, so long occupied, will be a memorate of the love and care he bestowed on those he loved.

The funeral takes place this afternoon at 5 o'clock from St. John's Episcopal church.

CITY'S MARK OF RESPECT.
Mayor Cook this morning issued the following notice:

Fayetteville, N. C., July 16, 1900. In the death of Col. T. S. Lutterloh we have lost one of our oldest citizens and one who for years was prominently identified with our business interests, and he had many offices of trust, and among them Mayor of Fayetteville, and as a mark of respect, I ask that the places of business be closed during the progress of the funeral services—the city bell will be tolled.—W. S. Cook, Mayor.

In Memoriam.
William T. Duval was born in Leon county, Florida, about four miles west from Tallahassee, in the year 1825, and died in Crawfordville, Wakulla county, Florida, in April, 1900, being seventy-five years ago.

In the year 1843, young Duval, with his father Ferme Duval, moved to Wakulla county, and settled near the famous Wakulla Springs, where he engaged in farming and stock raising. He soon afterwards married Miss Sarah L. Tucker, of Wakulla county, a young lady of great amiability and belonging to one of Wakulla's oldest and most honored families, whose mother was a sister of one of the pioneer and older families of the Wakulla Walkers.

Mrs. Sarah L. Duval died in June, 1897, at the age of sixty-seven years. She was a member of the Missionary Baptist Church, and was an intelligent, affable and lovable woman. She died as she had lived, a consistent christian. Four children, all boys, survive them. Frank, the eldest, is a leading merchant and business man in Crawfordville, a prominent and useful citizen of his county; William, who is familiarly known as "Cobb," is a farmer, living within a few miles of Crawfordville; Joe and Eugene, partners in business, are successful merchants doing business at Carrabelle, Franklin county, Florida.

William T. Duval had no aspiration for high office, but took great interest in local politics. The public records show that he was appointed by the Governor to the following offices, in and for the county of Wakulla, viz: to be justice of the peace for three terms of four years each; to be county treasurer for four terms of two years each; to be superintendent of public instruction for two terms of two years each. He was appointed to the office of county judge ad interim for an unexpired term of about two years, and at the expiration of the said unexpired term, was reappointed for the full term of four years. He was appointed notary public for the State at large for four years, and was once elected to the House of Representatives of the Florida Legislature, in which body he served with distinguished ability.

He was a lawyer by profession. He began the study of law late in life, and without a sufficient library or a preceptor. Thompson's Digest and the subsequent session laws of Florida, together with the Constitution of the United States and of Florida, constituted the basis of his law library. He studied the law at irregular intervals, as he could spare the time from his official duties, but by close application and perseverance he stood a creditable examination and was admitted to the bar. Being a farmer, and a merchant also, he did not give undivided attention to his profession; however he made his mark as an orator, being aided by a brilliant imagination and great command of language. He was a power before a jury. For the want of timely advantages, as a lawyer, he was not the peer of Ben Hill nor of John A. Henderson, and yet a distinguished lawyer of Tallahassee once said to the writer that he was the best advocate in the Second Judicial Circuit.

His chief characteristics were benevolence, good will, hospitality and charity. A better neighbor never lived near the writer.

He was a Missionary Baptist minister, but by reason of failing health he seldom preached or went from home for many years, and a severe attack of sciatic rheumatism entirely deprived him of locomotion for many months before his death. He was a great sufferer, but he bore his prolonged and painful illness with patience, fortitude and resignation. As the hopes of continued life faded away the light of immortality gleamed upon his latter days with the assurance of peace and eternal joy, and when death was upon him he called two of his sons, Frank and Joe, who were with him at the time, to his bedside and exhorted them, as brothers, to love each other, and to do unto others as they would have others do unto them, etc., bid them farewell and said that he hoped to meet them again by and by.

His way was clear and his death was peaceful.

A LIFE LONG FRIEND.
Did you ever think how often you eat and never stick your fork in your eye? You always stick your fork in your mouth. If you ate in the dark, it would be the same thing. You would never put out your eye by putting your fork in it. Why? Because your subconscious mind is doing its automatic duty and knows very well that you eat with your mouth and not with your eye.

Many other actions are automatic. For instance, 20 people have gathered on a street corner to board a passing car. The very fact that they are there means that the car will stop. The first man has already signaled the motor-man. So do the other 19. And the same thing happens if ten people gather to descend in an elevator. The first comes rings the bell. So do the other nine—merely automatically. The sign says "Ring," so each man takes this sign to himself and rings.

A shoemaker once had a shop in the basement of a large building down town. The shoemaker worked with his back to the door. Every time the door opened the shoemaker turned his head to the left to see who entered. For ten years the shoemaker worked and turned his head almost every hour in the day. Before many years had passed the shoemaker's head turned automatically, and now that man has spent all the money he has ever made trying to be cured of this automatic habit. But his head still jerks, so that he looks over his left shoulder constantly.—New York Herald.

Miscellaneous Statistics.

Editor Tallahasseean—As not all the people know the base figures authorizing a Legislature to redistrict its counties into an additional Congressional District, and the manner a basis was fixed and works out, the facts are here offered. "The ratio of representation simply means the ratio between the whole population of the United States, and the whole number of their Representatives in the Lower House of Congress; and this of course includes the ratio between the people of any individual State, and the Congressmen it is entitled to; both being estimated on the same basis and determined by the same rule." "The adjustment of this matter is provided for in the Federal Constitution, that is, in the general features; but Congress, after every tenth year's census, may readjust and reapportion the Representatives, according to the population of each State." The Constitution provides that "the actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall by law direct. The number of Representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty thousand, but each State shall have at least one Representative." "In 1870 the ninth census was taken, and in 1872 Congress decided that after March 3d, 1873, the Representatives should comprise 292 members, being one Representative for every 135,239 of the population." "Congress adopted this plan of permanently fixing the number of members of Congress, to save the trouble of doing it, as heretofore, every ten years." "In case the number of Congressmen allotted to a State is larger than the number of districts existing in it at the time, the Representatives in excess are voted for by the State at large." "The foregoing statements will show the general plan upon which the House of Representatives is constituted, and how the several States are constantly changing the number of their Representatives, and their relative power and influence in Congress." For example, when this plan was adopted Georgia was given 9, and New York 33 Congressmen, on the basis of a national population of 38,558,371; and in the next Congress had 11 and 34 respectively. Florida had 2 Representatives based on a population of 187,748, in 1870, which increased by 135,239 amounts to 322,987; but these figures were not reached until 1890.

The State census of 1895 showed a population of 464,600. If to this is added 14 per cent for the rate of increase for the preceding 5 of the 10 years, the population will be raised to nearly 530,000, which will add one to Florida's representation in Congress.

In 1890 to 1895 the white population increased from 224,949 to 271,561, a gain of 46,612. In the counties west of the Suwannee, the whites aggregated 79,462; blacks, 78,229. In the residue of the counties, the whites aggregated 192,099, and the blacks 114,810.

Increase of population, in the five years above designated, in the counties west of the Suwannee, whites over 15,000, blacks about 8,000. In the remainder aggregated increase 50,000. Whole increase in five years over 73,000.

It is not probable that the rate of increase in the population of the State will reach near as high a per centum for the five years following 1895. The return of refugees to Cuba, enlistments in the army and other causes will make a marked reduction; but still there will be inhabitants enough left to secure an additional Congressman; and every aspiring politician should buy or borrow a pocket map of the State, and proceed to redistrict its territory, so as that he may advance his own interests. Once upon a time there came into the city from the country a girl. The girl wandered from her happy home to secure employment among the wealthy families of the city, and when she made known the fact that she was willing to work many persons sought her and implored her to engage with them in domestic pursuits. The girl was overwhelmed with offers, but finally made a selection and settled in a family that valued her services very highly. The girl was happy until one day her employer met a neighbor, a very dear friend, and told her of her good fortune in finding the country girl. And this neighbor met another very dear friend and told her of her other friend's good luck, and thus did it become generally known that there was a good "hired girl" in the neighborhood.

And from that time on the mistress and the girl were unhappy until one day the very dear friend gave the girl $150 more a week than she was earning in her first place, and in this manner did the girl become happy again, while her mistress and the very dear friend ceased to be on speaking terms. And then the girl became unhappy again until the other very dear friend engaged her at an advance of $1, and the other dear friend and the first dear friend ceased to talk over the back fence. And then the good girl wore fine dresses and fine hats, and one day a dashing young man led her to the altar, and now the three friends and the poor country girl are all very happy.

Mrs. Col. Richardson SAVED BY MRS. PINKHAM.

[LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 72,896]

"You have saved my life, snatched me from the brink of the grave almost, and I wish to thank you. About eighteen months ago I was a total wreck, physically. I had been troubled with leucorrhoea for some time, but had given hardly any attention to the trouble.

"At last inflammation of the womb and ovaries resulted and then I suffered agonies, had to give up my profession (musician and piano player), was confined to my bed and life became a terrible cross. My husband summoned the best physicians, but their benefit was but temporary at best. I believe I should have contracted the morphia habit under their care, if my common sense had not intervened.

"One day my husband noticed the advertisement of your remedies and immediately bought me a full trial. Soon the pain in my ovaries was gone. I am now well, strong and robust, walk, ride a wheel, and feel like a girl in her teens. I would not be without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it is like water of life to me. I am very grateful and sincerely your well-wisher, and I heartily recommend your remedies. I hope some poor creature may be helped to health by reading my story."—Mrs. COL. E. P.
